A hand puppet is a type of puppet that is controlled by the hand or hands that occupies the interior of the puppet. Glove puppets are a variation of hand puppets. Glove puppetry (Chinese: 布袋戲; pinyin: bùdàixì; Peh-ōe-jī: pò-tē-hi) is a type of opera using cloth puppets that originated during the 17th century in Quanzhou or Zhangzhou of China's Fujian province, and historically practised in the Min Nan-speaking areas such as Quanzhou, Zhangzhou, the Chaoshan region of Guangdong, and other parts of southern China. It had since established itself contemporarily as a popular art form in Taiwan.
The simplest hand puppets are those with few or no moving parts. They can be stiff, made from e.g. a hard plastic, but are more often flexible, made from fabric, possibly with some stuffing and attached decorations for eyes, nose, and so on. The mouth may be a mere decoration that does not open and close, or the thumb may enter a separate pocket from the rest of the fabric and so simulate a mandible (lower jaw or jawbone), allowing the puppet to talk.

Junker Jane – Textiles Artists

My name is Catherine Zacchino, a.k.a. Junker Jane. I am a self-taught artist living in Portland Oregon. My art consists of one of a kind soft sculpture art dolls and paintings. Many things inspire me to come up with my art doll characters, but my main influence comes from my childhood — images from make-believe stories and books that I read. My sculptures are in galleries in various U.S. cities. Creating monsters and their little worlds makes me happy and I look forward to continuing this journey.
